

Do you need to transfer images from VF-50 disks to digital files?

You will get the images in both native resolution and enhanced resolutions.

I always save the result in a non-destructive (RAW) format, but you'll also get them in standard .jpg and .png formats as well.

Since we are talking about floppy disks from typically the '80's and '90s, (around 20-30 years old), you should be aware that there may be technical errors on some disks or in some pictures, because of demagnetization and other issues.

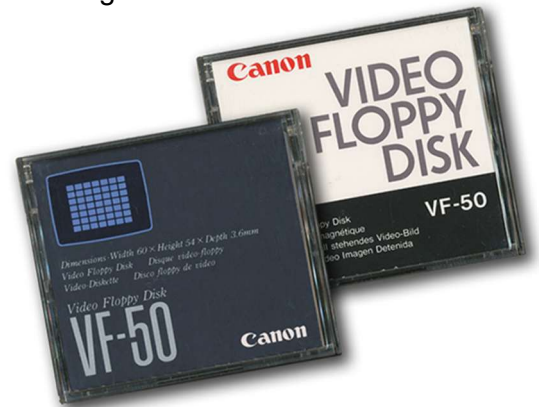

I can not guarantee that I can re-create all the images, but I always do my best and use high-end professional equipment to enhance the signals to get the best possible video image.

You should also know that the resolution of the CCDs those days was at best (pro) around 400 kPixels, but the most common (consumer) resolution is 200 kPixels (320x240 - 640x480).

My equipment scans each video frame in full Hi-band PAL, NTSC, SECAM or Digital CCIR 601 resolution; up to 768 x 576 (overscan) with 720 samples per line, at 13.5 MHz sampling (with digital blanking) or 702 samples per line, analogue blanking. On top of this I use professional digital scalers to de-interlace and enlarge the image.

Pricelist

Based upon number of individual images
1 - 50 images	€ 0,50	per image
51 - 199 images	€ 0,40	per image
200 + images	€ 0,25	per image

You only pay for pictures that are successfully transferred / copied.

After I have transferred your images, you'll be able to download them via Dropbox or you may get a private login to my website giving you access to your images directly. The login name and password is sent to the e-mail address provided with the disk(s).

If you want to have the physical disks returned back to you, and/or have the images on a USB stick, then you'll have to pay the return postage as well. Postage fee varies depending on country.

I will handle all floppies and its contents safe with the highest confidentiality.
